CONNECTICUT .-

General Order No. 7, issued at New Haven, Nov. 20, by command of William H. Pierpont, Department Commander-John H. Thacher, A. A.-G.contains the following: The reports for the quarter just ended show such an increase in losses that it must cause serious conpern in the minds of all who have at heart the wellfare of our beloved Order, and who desire that our Department may retain its present high standing. The loss by death has been small; but in suspensions, transfers and dropped members the figures are large, even for the third quarter; which, showing the smallest gains, makes the percentage of losses more noticeable. With the long, pleasant evenings of Autumn comes an opportunity to retrieve the losses of the Summer, and it is hoped that every comrade will feel a personal interest in swelling our ranks. There may be but little opportunity for gaining new recruits, but the work of restoring suspended or dropped members, when worthy, is of far more importance and contains far more of true comradeship. These comrades have siready enjoyed the fraternities of our Order; it is no untried field for them; and there are few of them-no matter what may be the causes which have sundered the ties which bound them to uswho do not keenly feel the loss of their former privileges, and would gladly return if requested to do so. Let delinquent committees take up this delicate and important duty in the spirit of true comradeship, using all honorable means to restore to our ranks those with whom we have touched elbows in bygone days of battle, or elasped hands in fraternal greeting in the light of our later campfires. Let each comrade resolve that the next meeting of his Post shall witness some fruit of his earnest effort in this direction, and these closing months of 1889 may be marked by an added feeling of leaternity and a deeper consecration to the principles of charity and loyalty which shall ender the year a memorable one in the history of this Department. Comrades, this field of labor is full of promise; the duty devolves upon you; will you accept it? Comrade Ames D. Allen, Assistant Adjotant-General, Department of Connecticut, the 23d National Encampment, at Milwaukee, Wis., having tendered his resignation, urging its immediate acceptance, it is hereby accepted, to date Sept. 3, 1889, and the Department Commander desires to express his warmest thanks to the retiring officer for the marked ability and unvarying courtesy with which he performed the duties of his office. Comrade John H. Thacher, of Post No. b), whose resignation was temporarily accepted, by reason of his inability to attend the 23d National Encomponent, is hereby reappointed Assistant Adjutant-General of this Department, to date from Sept. 4, 1889. The resignation of Comrade C. A. Harrison, Judge-Advocate, Department of Connecticul, is hereby accepted, to date Nov. 16, 1889. Rejections: Post 49, Albert Riggs, Co. D, 5th Conn.; Post 57, Albert P. Stark, Co. D, 2d Mass.: Post 3, Thomas Callaghan, "1st Class Boy," U. S. Navy.

The Commander of the Department of Arkansas announces that the Jensic Wells circular was sent with the Arkansus Department Headquarters; that Wells is not a member of the Grand Army, and advises, if any contributions are forwarded, that they be sent to some reliable party. No authority has been given by this Department for the mailing of the Wells circular to the Posts: Heartily approving of the work of compiling a National roster of the G.A.R., undertaken by Comrade Wm. R. Austin, of New York City, the Commander urges all Posts that have not already done so, to immedistely forward, either direct to Comrade Austin or to these Headquarters, their complete roster, giving name, company, regiment and postoffice address of every member. The Woman's Relief Corps and the Sons of Veterans are organizations which the Department heartily indorses. The former calling into its ranks loyal women of all classes, seeks to aid the comrades in their grand work of charity, and relieve the Posts in some measure of the labor and expense of seeking out and caring for the needy among the families of the soldiers and sailors, living and dead. Let every Post encourage their organization. Camps of Sons of Veterans tend to keep alive the spirit of loyalty and patriotism, and to hold the rising generation in closer sympathy with the principles for which our comrades fought. For this reason the Commander urges that there be Camps established in every munity. The work of recruiting the ranks of the Grand Army of the Republic from worthy com-rades who are still outside the Order should be taken up anew now that the long Winter evenings are upon us. In many communities it will be well to organize Recruiting Committees, by wards or townships, to personally solicit the applications of those who have bitherto refrained from entering the Post. This should not prevent individual comrades from working in the same direction. But while aiming to gather in the new recruits the old comrades who may have become delinquent for any reason should not be lost sight of. If they are needy and deserving, assist them by remitting their dues; if they are indifferent, rouse them by a cheerful, well-arranged Campfire. In some way manage to hold them in the ranks and keep them in close sympathy with the objects of our noble The last quarter showed a net gain of 583, with 11 Posts, having an estimated membership of 285, still delinquent. A majority of these Posts have since reported, and our total membership in the Department is now considerably above $2,000. There should be an increase of at least 1,000 during the remaining six weeks of 1889. Comrade J. B. Dilla, Assistant Inspector of Bureau County, tendered his resignation Oct. 4, which was accepted. Comrade James R. Cottle, of Ferris Post, No. 205, Princeton, was appointed to the position thus made vacant. The resignation of Fred, G. Bermius, Assistant Inspector for Madison County, has been accepted, and W. H. Shaffer, of Edwardswitte, Post 461, is appointed to fill the vacancy. Nevins Post, No. 1, Rockford, celebrated its 23d anniversary on Nov. 18. Visiting comrades were present from Chicago and other places. A campfire was lighted, after which Comrade John H. Sherratt delivered an address of welcome. A very interesting program was rendered, and it was a late hour before the comrades dispersed.

Farragut Post, No. 602, Chicago, held a grand entertainment on Nov. 21. Chaplain W. W. Brooks opened the proceedings with a few appropriate remarks, after which an elaborate program was carried out, which consisted of patriotic songs, instrumental music, tableaux, recitations, army bugie calls, sciopticon views, whistling variations, club swinging, manual of arms, and an address by Comrade E. PENNSYLVANIA .-After several years of neglect the Allegheny Council has made an appropriation, to be used in improving Seminary Hill, in that city, upon which the soldiers' monument stands. Nearly 21 years ago the monument was erected at a cost of $30,000, and for nearly as long a time it has been neglected. Improvements will be made, so that the top of the hill will be accessible, and visitors will be enabled to inspect the monument at close range. At present the memorial reminds one of a grim specter as it is observed at a distance through the hazy atmosphere. A grand hop was given in the Fifth Avenue Hall, Pittsburg, on Thanksgiving by Post No. 157. The Post has had a successful fair in the hall, which several of the local Posts have visited. Commander J. V. Brooks, of Post No. 230, Pittsburg, has been ill for eight weeks with typhoid fever, but is now convalescing.

Post No. 128, Allegheny City, opened a fair on Thanksgiving Day, and on Monday, Nov. 25, Ennis Post, No. 47, St. Clair, also started to replenish its treasury in the same manner. A most successful fair was closed on Saturday last at Heinitsh Hall, Lancaster where it had been in progress two weeks under the auspices of Post No. 405. ITINERATING THE NATIONAL PRESIDENT. DEAR TRIBUNE: I have just returned from an official visit to Boston. Leaving Philadelphia on the five a. m. train I reached Providence, R. I., in time to attend a banquet given by the W.R.C. at the Narragansett Hotel. A large number of leading G.A.R. men and representative women of the W.R.C. from all over the State were present. Later in the evening there was an entertainment in one of the public halls, where we enjoyed some fine music, and where several pieces were admirably rehearsed by the local elocutionist, after which I had the privilege of speaking of our work and future plans to a large audience.

The next day, on reaching Boston, I was quarered at the Thorndyke. I found on my arrival that, although I had come on other official business, the Department and local W.R.C. officers had arranged quite a program for me.

There was a banquet in the evening, at which Emma B. Lowd, Department President, presided with grace and ease. Mrs. Barker, of Malden, and Mrs. Fuller, of South Boston, both Past National Presidents, were present and spoke with the oldtime interest and zeal for the good of the Order. After I had spoken at some length of our work and plans, a number of leading comrades and ladies were called out, and spoke with great enthusiasm. The very air of Bostom is full of hope and expectation over the approaching National Encampment. Nothing will be left undone to make the Encampment there the grandest of all that have ever been arranging to produce a drama for the purpose of win the palm if they are carried out, and I have to-day, all they hold dear-flag, country, home-to no doubt of their success in that.

My visit to the Soldiers' Home, which the W.R.C. has done so much to make a success, was most enjoyable. My talk to the old soldiers in their beautiful, comfortable hall quite carried them away. They had discovered one of my hymns in the Athletic band proceeded to the new rooms at | the Moody and Sankey collection, and they sang it with great enthusiasm. As I talked of the war, its grand and awful scenes, and told of camp and hospital incidents, the old-time fire came into their eyes and they forgot for a while their crippled limbs and rheumatic pains, and cheered and laughed as heartily as when in the sixties as strongof the committee which fitted up the hall, made armed men they gathered about the campfires at

> SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT. I found one man in the hospital who was on one of the gunboats that ran the blockade at Vicksburg. When I told him I was there, and that, as the guest of General and Mrs. Grant, I had witnessed it from the "boat of observation," which lay at a point near the first batteries of Vicksburg, and described the grand and awful display of fireworks and the thunder of that grand artillery duel, weak as he was he lifted himself in his bed, the old-time brightness came into his eyes, and he eagerly responded: "That's so! Wasn't it grand? Now, that will be something to think about for a good while. Thank you for coming." With a bearty grasp of hands as we parted he said; "We shall meet up yonder. I am ready!" With tears almost blinding me, as I thought of the hundreds to whom I had ministered during the war who had uttered the same words, I answered: "God be with you till we meet again; up there, it may be !"

I had the privilege of attending an entertainment at Dorchester, at which I spoke. The banquet and the musical and elocutionary entertainment which followed were very fine. Although quartered at the Thorndyke, I was the guest for a time of the Department President, Mrs. Lowd, and Past National Treasurer, Mrs. Turner. I must reserve for another article my visit to the Capitol Building, my call upon the Secretary of State and the Postmaster of Boston, who, by the by, is an old acquaintance, Gen. Corse, " who held the fort," and my visit to the Corps at Pawiucket, R. L., on my return trip.-Annie Wittenmyer.

Department Gleanings.

DEPARTMENT OF MASSACHUSETTS. General Orders, No. 6, of Emma B. Lowd, Department President of Massachusetts-Mary E. Elliott, Secretary-give the following: Number of members in good standing, 8,569. Expended for relief .... Turned over to Posts .... 816 33

Relief other than money .....

The following paragraphs indicate a busy Winter for the W.R.C. of the "Old Commonwealth" Attention is called to the Circular issued by the Trustees of the Soldiers' Home, which accompanies this order. The new plan adopted by them for covering the expense of furnishing the rooms assigned to the Corps must necessarily tax our resources to a greater extent than before. It is hoped that no Corps that has already applied for a room will be discouraged because the sum named seems large, as terms of gradual payment may be made with the Treasurer of the Board. Remember that the needs of this grand charity were never so pressing as now. The enlargement of the Home nvolves largely-increased expense in its maintenance; about 140 more veterans will be sheltered beneath its roof. The coming of the National Enampment to Boston next year absorbs, to a great extent, the energy and funds of many friends of the Home, and prevents any attempt to hold a large fair in its aid. We must depend upon the efforts of individuals, and we look to our Corps to support this noble institution in its time of need. The $125 covers the expense of furniture, mattresses and pillows; all other articles are in addition to this sum. Fourteen Corps have already applied for rooms in the new addition, Union Corps, No. 52, of Peabody, leading off with the first payment of $125 in cash.

The eighth annual Convention of the National pared to extend them a welcome such as we alor can give. We need the aid of every member of the Order to make it a success, and we shall call upon all to do their part. Committees will soon be organized to plan and execute the work of preparation, and future orders and circulars will give instruction for your guidance. Meantime let all Corps anticipate this by raising the necessary funds to meet these calls by such methods as they may deem best. Tenders of service and money are already coming in from all parts of the Department, and all are proving their understanding of fraternity and loyalty.

DEAR TRISUNE: Boston has been honored by a visit from the National President, Mrs. Annie Wittenmyer, and all whose privilege it was to be present with her were impressed with the sincere devotion that noble, loyal woman has in the Woman's Relief Corps, Gen. Lander Corps, No. 29, Lynn, had its annual inspection on Thursday, Nov. 12, by M. A. G. Robinson, of Salem. Members were present from Salem, Saugus, Marblehead and Swampscott. Jennie Sawyer has been quite iil; Mrs. Clara H. Smith has been on a tour of inspection.

Col. Allen Corps, No. 77, Gloucester, presented their President, the Department Instituting and Installing Officer, Eva T. Cook, with an elegant steel engraving.
H. M. Warren Corps, No. 69, was honored by a visit from Department Officers—Senior Vice M. E. Knowles, Junior Vice A. A. Wales, Treasurer Harriette L. Reed, I. and I. Officer Eva T. Cook ; Excutive Board, L. F. Fiowers and Eliza F. Stiles. Department President Emma B. Lowd was unable to be present on account of previous engagement, Emma F. Mansfield inspected the Corps; the work was well done. Much credit is due the efficient President, C. Della Lock, who works with a will and energy. The Corps are already at work in assisting the Post in a grand fair which is to take place in April. A fine collation was served, speeches by all the officers present, and a most enjoyable J. P. Gould Corps, No. 65, Stoneham, was inspected by Margaret B. Cutler, of Woburn, on the evening of Nov. 8.—Abbie L. Whitney, Department Corresponding Secretary, Southampton, Mass.

DEPARTMENT OF NEW JERSEY. DEAR TRIBUNE: A very interesting meeting of C. K. Hall Corps, No. 25, Department of New Jersey, was held on the evening of Nov. 11 at Asbury Park, The hall of Darius A. Drake Post, Lake Village, duties while the process of curing goes on in its duties while the process of curing goes on in its pector Lanning being present. After the Inquiet, painless way.

dates were initiated to her entire satisfaction, good cheer followed, and words of encouragement were spoken by our beloved Department officers, especi-ally by Past Department President Lanning, who is particularly interested in No. 25, which she terms her "baby." This Corps has apparently started on a career of prosperity. An invitation to supper from A. E. Burnside Camp, S. of V., at Long Branch, sponding Secretary. HONORING A PAST NATIONAL OFFICER. DEAR TRIBUNE: Mary J. Ingraham, Past National Junior Vice-President, recently moved from New Jersey to New Hampshire, writes in glowing terms of the warm and fraternal greeting extended to her personally by the W.R.C. of that Department, and also of the very fine work performed by the Corps in the old Granite State. Mrs. Ingraham has lately visited Wm. C. Berry Corps, of Woodbridge, N. J., of which she is still a member, and was surprised and pleased by the presentation of a gold recognition pin by her sister members, as a token of their appreciation of her services as Corps President, to which she had been elected a second term, but resigned upon her removal to another State. The position is very worthily filled by the wife of Past Commander Inslee, of Wm. C. Berry Post,-Annie E. Lawrence, Department Corresponding Secretary.

A WORD FROM KANSAS, DEAR TRIBUNE: Inspection is going on rapidly and thoroughly this year. Seven Inspectors, one for each Congressional District, will visit each Corps in the State and revive those who had become disheartened by poor crops and lack of interest, but this year have corn and wheat in abundance. In my own district, "the big sixth," which has 38 Corps, and which requires 1,000 miles travel to reach them, I find many enthusiastic enough to go 15 and 20 miles to inspection, and THE NATIONAL RIBUNE in nearly every family of the members.-

DEPARTMENT OF PENNSYLVANIA. DEAR TRIBUNE: On Oct. 19, Emery Fisher Post, of Johnstown, held a memorial service for the 12 comrades who perished in that fearful disaster. Helen S. Morrison, Department President, and your correspondent, who visited Johnstown a day or two before the day set apart for this sad service, on their way home visited the Pittsburg florists. John R. and A. Merreloch, and ordered a floral tribute to be sent to the Post, and in response received a letter of thanks from Comrade West in behalf of the Post.

The Corps recently organized at Greenville, Pa., auxiliary to John C. Dickey Post, G.A.R., gave a reception to the Post and friends a few evenings ago, which was a very enjoyable affair, consisting of music, speeches, recitations, etc.; ice cream, cake and fruit being served in profusion. One of the local papers, in writing up the event, calls the Corps the "better half of the Post," and says: "Again has the Woman's Relief Corps vindicated its right to exist. Indeed, the boys now affirm that it is a necessity, and wonder how we got along without it so long before. As in individual life, so in organized existence, a Woman's Relief Corps is essential to completeness."

The Board of Directors of the Memorial Home of Pennsylvania, at their meeting at Harrisburg on the 31st ult., decided to locate the Home at Brookville, the W.R.C. of the Department of Pennsylvania obligating themselves to purchase Hotel Longview for the purpose. This property, which we described in a former letter, is one of the finest in this part of the State, while its beautiful grounds and lovely surroundings of hill, stream and forest cannot be excelled anywhere. Its fixtures and furnishing are complete, and can be occupied at any time, so that when the W.R.C. are ready (which will be in a very few months) to gather in those loved ones whom the dying and disabled soldiers leave to our care, they will have a beautiful home complete in all its appointments, waiting for them. But in doing this the Woman's Relief Corps of this Department incur a debt of $25,000, which they posed. must cancel before the Home is really theirs; and tion will rally to the help of the W.R.C., even as these veterans rallied then. We do not ask you to shoulder your musket and take your lives in your hands as these men did, but to give for the maintenance of those they have left destitute a little of the means that their bravery made it possible for you to accumulate. To the liberal-hearted business men of Pennsylvania do we especially appeal for assistance in this matter. The Directors of the Pennsylvania Memorial Home are as follows: President, Hon. A. F. Thomp son, Lykens; V.-P., Annie Wittenmyer, Secane; Freas., T. S. Johnston, Huntingdon; Sec., Isaac B. Brown, Harrisburg; Ass't Sec., Abbie Lynch, Allegheny; Capt. George G. Boyer, Harrisburg; Maj. Chas. F. McKenna, Pittsburg; Maj. Chas. N. DEAR TRIBUNE: The near approach of Christmas time made it very apparent to Buckley Corps that something should be done in order to raise funds to meet the demands that will be made on our treasury at that time, and for the comfort of the needy soldiers' families during the entire Winter. Having heard of an entertainment called the "Merchants' Carnival," given in another city with great success, they concluded to try it in our city. The carnival was held in Columbia Hall on the evenings of Nov. 21, 22 and 23, when the business men of the city seemed to vie with each other in the getting up of costumes to represent their different kinds of business, and the entertainment was one of the most brilliant and successful affairs ever given in Akron by a charitable organization. In connection with this the ladies served dinners for three days in succession in the same hall, and icecream and cake during the evening. Cone would almost suppose that the same enterainment given three nights in succession would Woman's Relief Corps will be held in Boston.

but in this instance the anatomical differences between the genera Canis and Vulpes are commonly regarded as insufficient to remove the foxes from the group of dogs, whose general structural traits have been already described. With respect to minor characters, many which are pecular to themselves may be found among foxes. They differ from Canidæ in being smaller and less massive than these; in having the pupil of the eye vertical and eliptical instead of round. Their teeth also, as a whole, are more delicate, and the upper incisors are less curved; the muzzle is also longer and more pointed than in dogs; they have a fetid subcaudal gland; the tail is of greater length, cylindrical and very bushy, while the number of species which naturalists suppose themselves to have established is greater than those belonging to their allies. Further, although Fitzinger and others have stated that crosses may be made between domestic dogs, wolves, jackals and foxes, it is probably untrue that the dog and fox ever interbreed, and this witnesses to a physiological difference between them which is more radical than zoologists have sup-

JACKAL. America and Australia. Of these specific forms all the fennec foxes are exclusively African, and all the bristle-tailed species American. For the rest, anything like an adequate description of their respective peculiarities would probably be very tiresome, and the subject must, therefore, be considered more generally, and at the same time, unfortunately, more superficially.

Dr. Jerdon describes the fox of India as about 34 inches in length (measured from tip to tip), from a foot to 14 inches in hight, and he gives its average weight as seven pounds. It "varies a good deal," he says, "in the shades of color in different localties, and according to season."

THE ANIMAL IS FOUND ALL OVER INDIA, and he enumerates several species—the Bengal fox, to which the above statements apply, and the desert, hill, and Punjab foxes-which differ from each in the texture and shading of the coat, in their habitats and habits of life, in size, and in the conformation of their heads. The Indian fox lives in the plains, and "is rarely found in foresta"; but unlike the southern species in this country, he inhabits burrows, similarly with the red fox of America and Europe. This Bengal species is said by Jerdon to be "easily tamed," and quite frolicsome in captivity, a trait which, if truly described, establishes a marked psychological difference between the Indian and the European and American animals, which are much attachment to man as will prevent them | wrought by these grim murderers. from biting the hand that feeds them. Again, these Indian foxes of the plains are depredators of the worst kind upon the Hindu agriculturist; while here, the gray southern fox so rarely touches domestic fowls that Audubon and Bachman say they "never heard of a done so, unless these latter had wandered off into the woods. Another general fact belonging to the Asiatic group is that, as said by Jerdon and others, it is very subject to hydrophobia. Such is certainly not the case with either the gray or red species of America, and although the Arctic foxes occasionally go mad in both hemisamong those of the Baltic States, and the same disease occurs sporadically in Scandinavia now, yet nothing that could be called a predisposition to it is known to exist among these animals | our reasons:

elsewhere. Foxes, as a class, cannot be said to have a special breeding season, as this varies among them according to climate; but, generally, the period of gestation is about 60 or 65 days, and Hospital No. 16, Jeffersonville, Ind., 1864. In this form the face is broader and nose shorter than in the red species, the soles of the feet are covered with hair, as in the Arctic fox, and it is of a very pale grayish-brown color in Winter. The common names for this animal explain some of its traits, but it does not appear that, like

THE FOX OF THE INDIAN PLAINS, this animal has the foresight so to place its burrows that they shall be at all times secure from floods. Otherwise, it generally constructs its own subterranean retreat, whereas the common fox of Europe is so averse to digging, that in the event of not being able to dispossess a hare or badger from its hole, it actually will take up its quarters with the latter, or even occupy those artificial burrows which are constructed for them in parts of Germany in order to facil-T has been stated that | itate getting at their cubs. To give even a sketch of this subject within the space which remains is impossible, and we will therefore briefly describe the last member of the Thooid group of Cynoidae, the jackal, and reserve an account of the faculties of both animals until the next issue of THE NATIONAL

The Indian jackal-Canis aureus-is also found in Lower Burmah, though but recently introduced, or more properly, recently self-intreduced there, and according to Dr. Jerdon its geographical distribution includes most of Asia, Ceylon, South Europe and North Africa.

THE VARIOUS SPECIES There are 24 species of foxes recorded, and | belonging to these localities are closely allied, the grand divisions of the world except South | throughout the genus. This trait differs with topographical position-as for example in Bengal, where a black variety exists-but generally the jackal is of a dusky-brown or rufous-gray tint on the back and sides, and the hairs are mottled with black. Its tail is reddish-gray, with a black tip, and rather hairy, while the muzzle and limbs are rufous, and below the hue is a yellowish-gray. It is a small animal, about the average size of the American coyote, and structurally has all those characteristic features of the Canida which were stated when discussing the conformation of this family.

Together with certain birds-the crows, vultures, Marebout stork, etc., the jackal may be called the scavenger of the East, and indeed of all those other countries where it resides. Beyond doubt it is the most omniverous of all the dog-like animals, and in India, where its habits have been most accurately observed, it has been found to eat every kind of devitalized flesh, whether fresh or putrid, besides game of all those sorts which the cowardly creature ventures to attack and can kill. Jackals also devour great quantities of coffee berries in the plantations of Upper India, consume the ber fruit in immense quantities, are very destructive to the fields of sugarcane in Baglalpore, and Col. Sykes says are the ruin of vineyards.

The animal usually inhabits burrows in the earth, similar to those of the Indian wolf and fox, but in certain places, there and elsewhere, has been known to occupy natural caves, the shafts, or rather pits, of deserted mines, and ruined buildings. These latter are favorite haunts of the tiger in many parts of India, and the jackal's relations with this animal are very much the same with those which he bears to the lion elsewhere. Four cubs are generally produced at a birth, and, as the creature is but little hunted, except by Englishmen who desire to exercise their grayhounds and horses, its numbers are so great that the struggle for life has developed those omniverous propensities spoken of, and also evolved it intelligence to the extent of making it one of the most cunning, wary, and generally capable of beasts. At the same time it is unquestionably a most contemptible as well as disgusting animal, although despite this fact it is an interesting one. The fierce, timid, astute brute has almost as many wiles as a fox. His unearthly cry is A. BALDWIN, Pres.
